

The background of the poster is a large, solid red triangle that points downwards, occupying the right half of the composition. On the left, a grey mountain range is depicted with jagged, angular peaks. The mountains are rendered in two shades of grey, with the foreground range being darker. A series of thin, vertical black lines of varying heights and widths are positioned between the red triangle and the grey mountains, creating a sense of depth and texture. The overall style is minimalist and geometric, characteristic of mid-20th-century graphic design.

grafik

ausstellung des
verbandes schweiz. grafiker kunstgewerbemuseum zürich

18. april - 23. mai 1943